EARNED EXCELLENCE

THE BEST BUSINESS SCHOOLS
IN THE WORLD

RELEVANCE, GROUNDED IN AN ELITE TRADITION.

Seventeen of the most prominent business schools in the United States, including Columbia University, Cornell University, Dartmouth College, and Harvard University, founded AACSB. As longstanding members of AACSB, these prestigious institutions speak to a timeless tradition of exclusivity and excellence.

This tradition remains current and forward-looking. AACSB International accreditation represents a business school's understanding of the complex demands faced by today's business organizations and leaders: global economic forces, conflicting values, changing technology in products and processes, and demographic diversity among employees and customers.

Just as business leaders face rising expectations for their performance and the performance of their organizations, programs in management education must also pursue higher standards. AACSB International has been dedicated to continuous relevance and improvement since the adoption of the first standards. Additional standards for programs in accountancy were adopted in 1980. AACSB International accredited members approved mission-linked accreditation standards in 1991. In 2003, accredited members approved standards that are relevant within the context of business programs around the world.

ASSOCIATE WITH THE BEST.

Less than one-third of U.S. business school programs and only 15% of business school programs worldwide meet the rigorous standards of AACSB International accreditation. This distinction is an achievement requiring a tremendous amount of effort. It's worth it.

AACSB International accreditation continuously challenges business schools to perform at the highest level. AACSB International accreditation informs the world that a business school manages resources to achieve a vibrant and relevant mission. It speaks of faculty scholarship, high-caliber teaching of quality and current curricula, and meaningful interaction between students and faculty.

In short, AACSB International accreditation is the world's most widely-recognized and most sought-after endorsement. It tells prospective students, faculty, and employers that an AACSB International accredited school produces graduates who are prepared to succeed in the business world. AACSB International accreditation is earned excellence of the highest caliber.
