Department Overview

Theatre Arts at UWL offers an invigorating and fresh approach to undergraduate theatrical training. The Theatre Arts degree allows a wide range of opportunity while creating a focused and individual area of study for each student. We strive to balance vigorous classroom learning with practical production experience allowing for a well-rounded college experience with an emphasis on the collaborative and creative process. The theatre arts curriculum allows concentrations in six distinct areas of study: general theatre studies, design/technical, performance, music theatre, stage management and arts administration. Students at UWL can choose to major in one theatre emphasis area while minoring in another thus enhancing their educational opportunities and professional marketability.

One-on-one contact with our teaching faculty is emphasized and students are guaranteed a degree of personal attention rarely available in programs that accept higher numbers of students. In addition to its full-time faculty, the department frequently brings guest artists to campus from professional and educational theatre. The atmosphere within the Theatre Arts Department is supportive, positive, collaborative and artistically stimulating. Students are involved in theatre productions each year as backstage crew, technicians, designers, stage managers, performers, and front of house staff. Participation in theatre productions is open to all UWL students regardless of their major.

The performance stage is the natural extension of the classroom experience. Students receive a tremendous amount of hands-on experience through classroom projects and realized productions. The UWL Department of Theatre Arts produces six performances each academic year allowing students to demonstrate, refine and expand the skills they've learned in the classroom. Additional production work is available through classroom projects, senior recitals and designs, undergraduate research grant-funded productions, and other student laboratory productions.

Department Features

FACILITIES

The Center for the Arts houses the Marie Park Toland Theatre, a 410-seat proscenium theatre with mechanical thrust supported by fully equipped scene, properties and costume studios, new computerized lighting system, makeup and dressing rooms, and a publicity studio. The Theatre Arts Department produces four major productions in the Toland Theatre as well as a dance performance and a Summer Stage musical.

The Robert Lee Frederick Theatre, a 105-seat theatre with a flexible thrust stage, provides a more intimate setting for smaller scale season productions as well as student developed productions. With a minimum of faculty control, students can experiment, explore and mature artistically with student-developed productions in the Frederick Theatre. The Theatre Arts Department produces one mainstage season production and a children's theatre performance in the Frederick Theatre as well as various senior acting recitals and student laboratory productions.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Scholarships in theatre arts, ranging from $100-$1500, are awarded for scholastic achievement, theatre participation and financial need. While most scholarships are awarded to current students, some scholarship dollars are available to incoming freshmen committed to theatre study.

In addition to scholarships, part-time employment in theatre is available through both work-study and student help programs with students earning from $750-$1500 per semester. Depending on skills and interests, student may work in such areas as scenery or costume construction, properties, lighting, or sound design, house management or publicity.

Additional funding for student run productions or research projects is available through undergraduate research grants. Theatre students have received undergraduate research funding to study pub theatre in London, research puppetry in Prague, direct or produce a theatre performance, research scenic designs in Italy, develop multicultural productions, and study theatre in Italy, Ghana, Vietnam, London, Russia and Scotland. Opportunities for undergraduate research funding for theatre projects are endless with funding for travel expenses, student stipends, and supplies.

THEATRE INTENSIVE OPPORTUNITIES

The Theatre Arts Department endeavors to provide students with the tools necessary to function as complete artists and self-realized individuals, combining theatrical training and a strong liberal arts curriculum with an emphasis on the collaborative and creative process. Students will receive course credit for hands-on experience in all areas of theatrical production including working in the costume/scene shop, assisting with box office ticket sales, house managing, performing, designing sound and lighting, and contributing to production publicity.

Because we think that is essential for our students to engage with professional theatres prior to graduation, UWL Theatre Arts faculty and staff actively assist interested students in setting up internships, paid apprenticeships, and employment opportunities at professional theaters. We believe that it is essential for students to actively connect with other theatre professionals prior to graduation. In recent years, students have interned or been employed during their college career at the Guthrie Theatre, Commonweal Theatre, Electronic Theatre Controls (ETC), Theatre de la Jeune Lune, Arena Stage, the Arrow Rock Lyceum Theatre, and Colorado Shakespeare Festival.

The final academic assessment of a student's artistic vision and technical abilities is the capstone senior project. These projects are within the student's area of emphasis and require a tremendous amount of research and collaboration with faculty and fellow students to produce the final project. Performance students present an acting recital with a selection of monologues and scene work. Design/technical students often complete a scenic/lighting or costume design for a mainstage production.

GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE

The Theatre Arts Department is dedicated to providing a diverse and global perspective by teaching coursework in a cultural context from various cultures/geographic regions around the world, maintaining nontraditional casting whenever possible, and linking with other organizations to provide culturally-rich programming. In order to maintain a competitive edge in a globally diverse field such as the arts, students need opportunities to participate in an international experience. To meet the needs of students, UWL has a strong international study abroad program. The Theatre Arts Department has also created a week-long London Study Tour program which immerses students in the artistic and cultural scene of London with the focus on attending theatre productions, symphony and choral performances, art galleries, and culturally significant locations.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

Excellence in the classroom, as well as in productions, is the foundation of the theatre arts program with student's successfully managing classroom and production work, nightly rehearsals, employment, family and friends, and other extracurricular activities. Our student-to-faculty ratio is smaller than many comparable programs, allowing for more individualized attention. We know who our students are and how they're performing academically and artistically. UWL Theatre Arts has a comprehensive system in place to provide each student with regular feedback on their progress and development as a student and as an artist.

Theatre students and productions at UWL have been nationally recognized for their excellence and professionalism by the Kennedy Center American College Theatre Festival (KCACTF). Since fall 2005, UWL productions have been awarded over 60 nominations to the Irene Ryan Acting Competition and over 35 Certificates of Merit in the areas of directing, design, and stage management.

Occupational Outlook

Our blend of unlimited opportunities and close personal attention produces excellent results. Over 90 percent of our graduates find jobs or pursue graduate level degrees in theatre. Theatre study includes a comprehensive study in theater, practical experience in professional production, and a solid background in the liberal arts. Talent, commitment, energy, and discipline are key personal qualities required for successful theater careers. Most professional occupations today require a college-educated individual who can write and speak well, solve problems, learn new information quickly, utilize technology, and work well with others on a team to solve creative challenges. A major in theatre arts prepares students well for an amazing variety of collaborative, creative, people-oriented careers.
