

DEPRESSION

What is depression?

Depression is a treatable condition that involves the body, mood, and thoughts. A depressive condition is not the same as a passing "blue" mood. It is not a sign of personal weakness or a condition that can be willed away.

Symptoms of depression

Not everyone with a depressive condition experiences every symptom. Some of the symptoms of depression can include:

- Persistent sad, anxious, or numb mood
- Feelings of hopelessness
- Feelings of guilt, worthlessness, or helplessness
- Loss of interest or pleasure in hobbies and activities that were once enjoyed
- Decreased energy, fatigue, feeling slowed down
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering, making decisions
- Trouble sleeping, early morning awakening or oversleeping
- Restlessness, irritability
- Thoughts of death or suicide or suicide attempts
- Persistent physical symptoms such as headaches, chronic pain, and digestive disorders

Treatments

In general, severe depressive symptoms, particularly those that are recurrent, will require a combination of treatments for the best outcome. It usually takes a few weeks of treatment before the full therapeutic effect occurs.

If you are concerned about sadness or depression, take time to visit with a counselor at the UWL Counseling and Testing Center.

Develop a self care plan

When feelings become intense, it's important to have a plan of how to take care of yourself.

Consider the following questions, and incorporate them into your self care plan:

1. Who is a supportive person I could call or spend time with?
2. How will I know I need to use my self care plan?
3. What is a distracting activity I can engage in?
4. What are a few self care activities I know work for me?
5. What are my emergency resources should I need them? (Hint: listed below)
