

Fifth Annual Social Justice Week at UWL:
Time to Show Up: Igniting Action
April 6-10, 2020

CALL FOR PAPERS, PANELS, ROUNDTABLES, AND COMPLETE SESSIONS

Faculty, staff, and students are cordially invited to submit papers, panels, roundtable presentations, and complete sessions for UWL's Fifth Annual Social Justice Week April 6-10, 2020, sponsored by the Institute for Social Justice.

Our theme this year is Time to Show Up: Igniting Action, and so we particularly welcome submissions that explore collective liberation through activism, advocacy, art, community engagement or any other forms of direct action.

Social Justice Week will feature daily lunch-and-learn presentations, afternoon sessions/roundtables/panels, and evening presentations focused on social justice research, teaching, and advocacy. Special events and keynote speakers will be announced at a later date.

If you are interested in organizing a session and/or presenting your work during Social Justice Week, please submit a brief abstract (150-200 words) along with your contact information to Kate Parker at kparker@uwlax.edu. Please keep in mind that selected abstracts will appear in the final program.

The deadline for submitting abstracts has been extended to Monday, November 11th, 2019.

Please note: UWL offices, institutes, programs, and student organizations that do social justice work are encouraged to organize special sessions or events during Social Justice Week. Please contact Dr. Parker for information about how to get added to the Social Justice Week calendar.
