Session Overview

- Time and timing
- Deadlines
- The Timeline
- Timeline Milestones
- Takeaways
- Questions

Research grant writing in progress.

Time is a critical element in the process

Effective amounts of work time are needed to tackle proposal development, including efforts to:

- Assess the field
- Assess your ideas
- Explore funding sponsors
- Writing
- The feedback loop

Making time

Time and effort are keys to proposal
success

No time? Employ intentional strategies for carving out
time/space to work:

- Swap work/home assignments
- Make it portable
- Dedicate an insular workspace
- Rise earlier/go to sleep later

Timing/planning is also critical

When do you need to start work on your project?

Federal agencies

- Availability of Funding notices:
 - “In general,” 60 days notice
 - As little as 30 days notice

Non-federal sponsors

- Annual/semi-annual RFPs; program purpose may change
- Foundations
 - Rolling deadlines with review on a quarterly basis
 - 2-step process?

Deadlines and the timeline

The planning phase: Brainstorming

The more an idea is developed, the more concise becomes its expression; the more a tree is pruned, the better is the fruit.

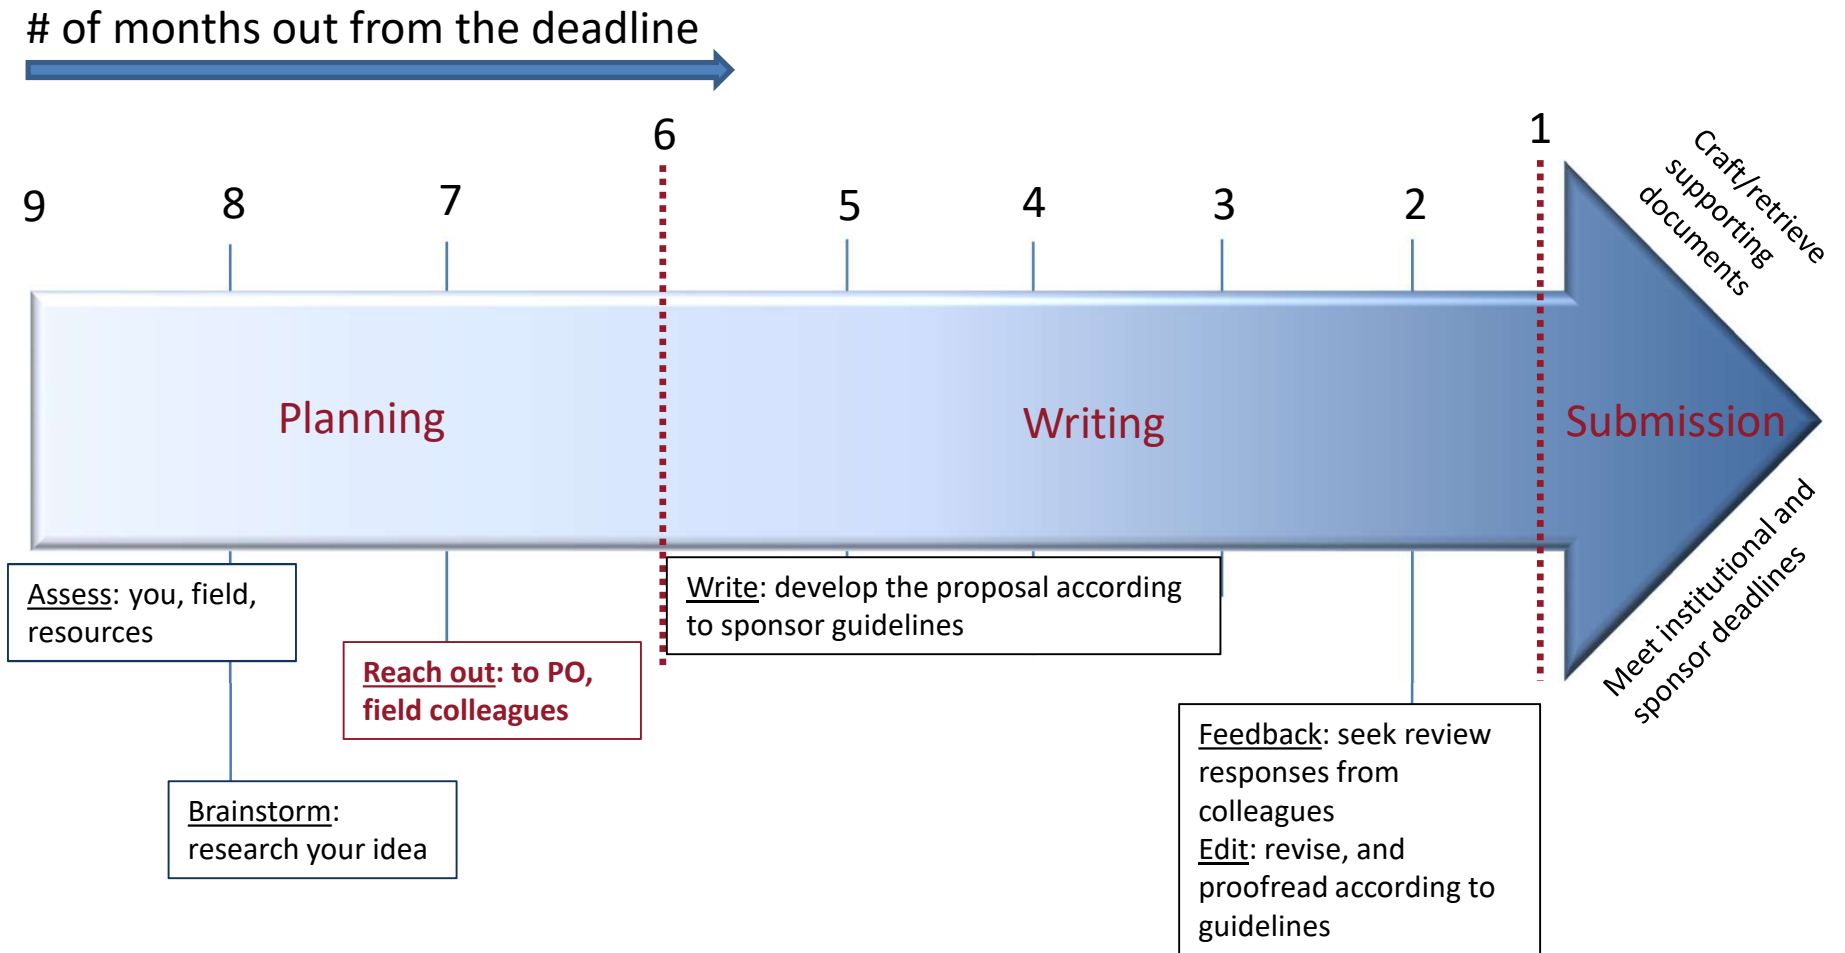

-Alfred Bougeart

Developing good ideas

- Be knowledgeable, thoughtful, open
- Think in question/hypothesis format
- Keep an ideas log, incubate ideas
- Seek constructive criticism of your idea

Going from a good idea to a fundable idea by asking the right questions

General proposal development timeline

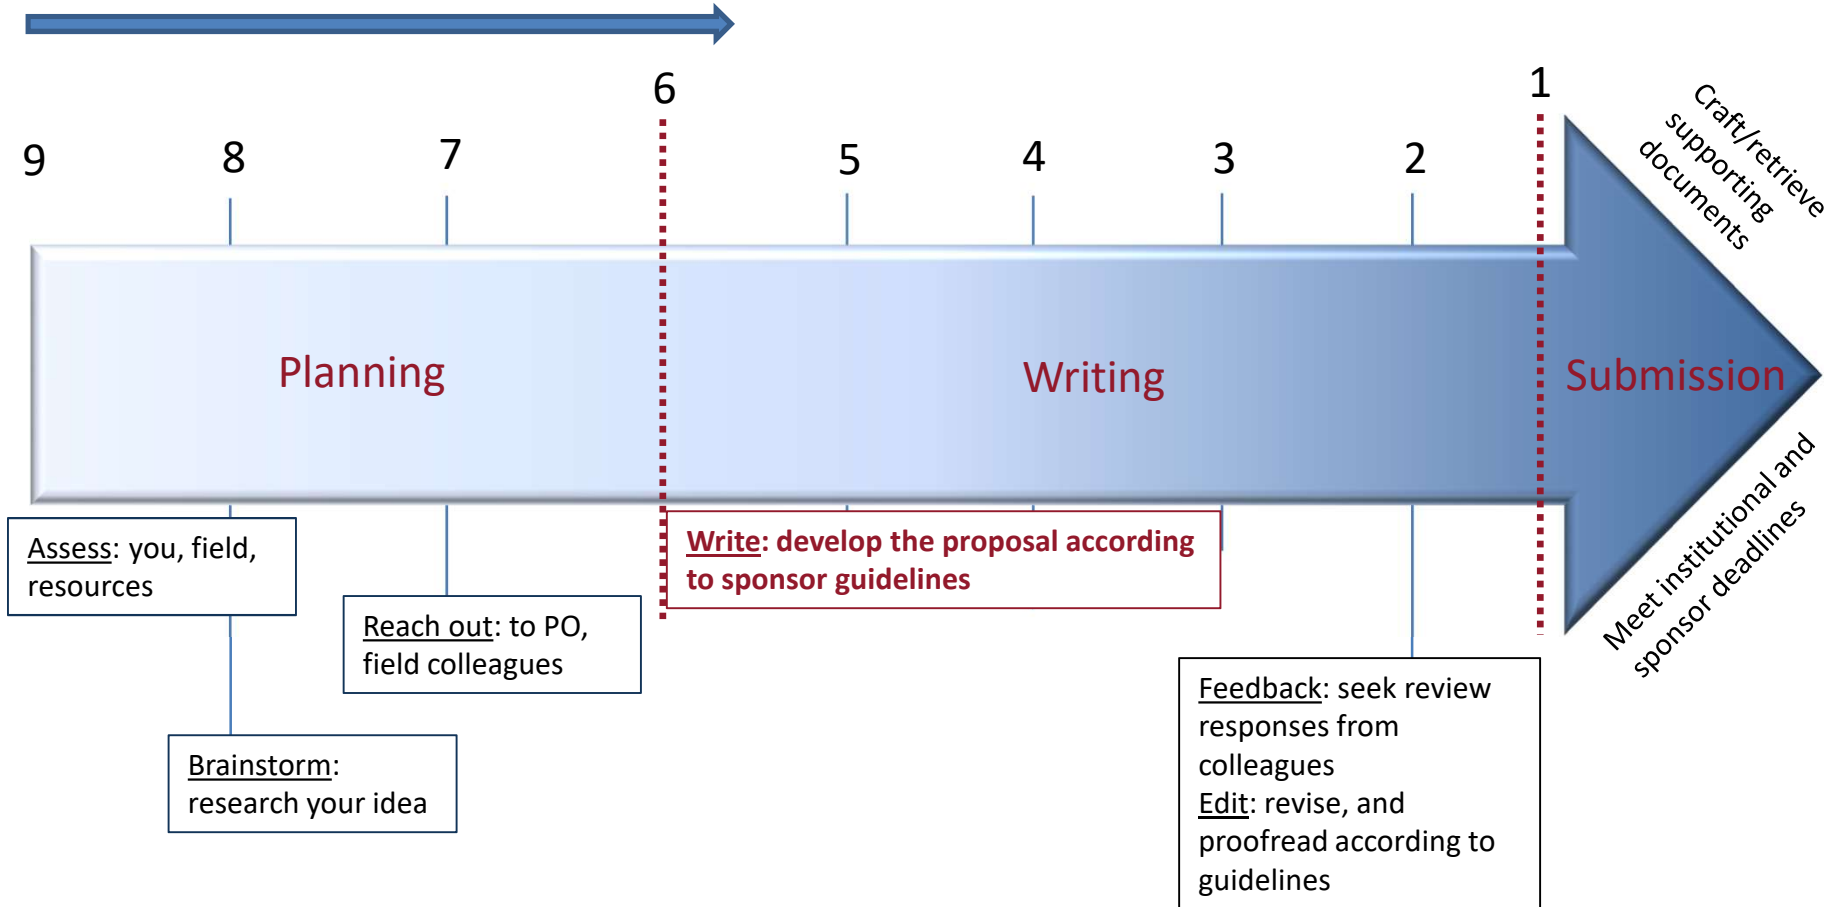

The planning phase: Reaching out

- Reach out to SPO
- Explore funding opportunities
- If applicable, seek collaborators
- Reach out to sponsors
- Determine next steps

General proposal development timeline

The writing phase: Draft narrative development

- Outline the guidelines/requirements
- Team effort? Work assignments
- Identify budget needs
- Seeking feedback? Establish the timeline
- The nonlinear writing process

General proposal development timeline

of months out from the deadline

The writing phase: Feedback and revising

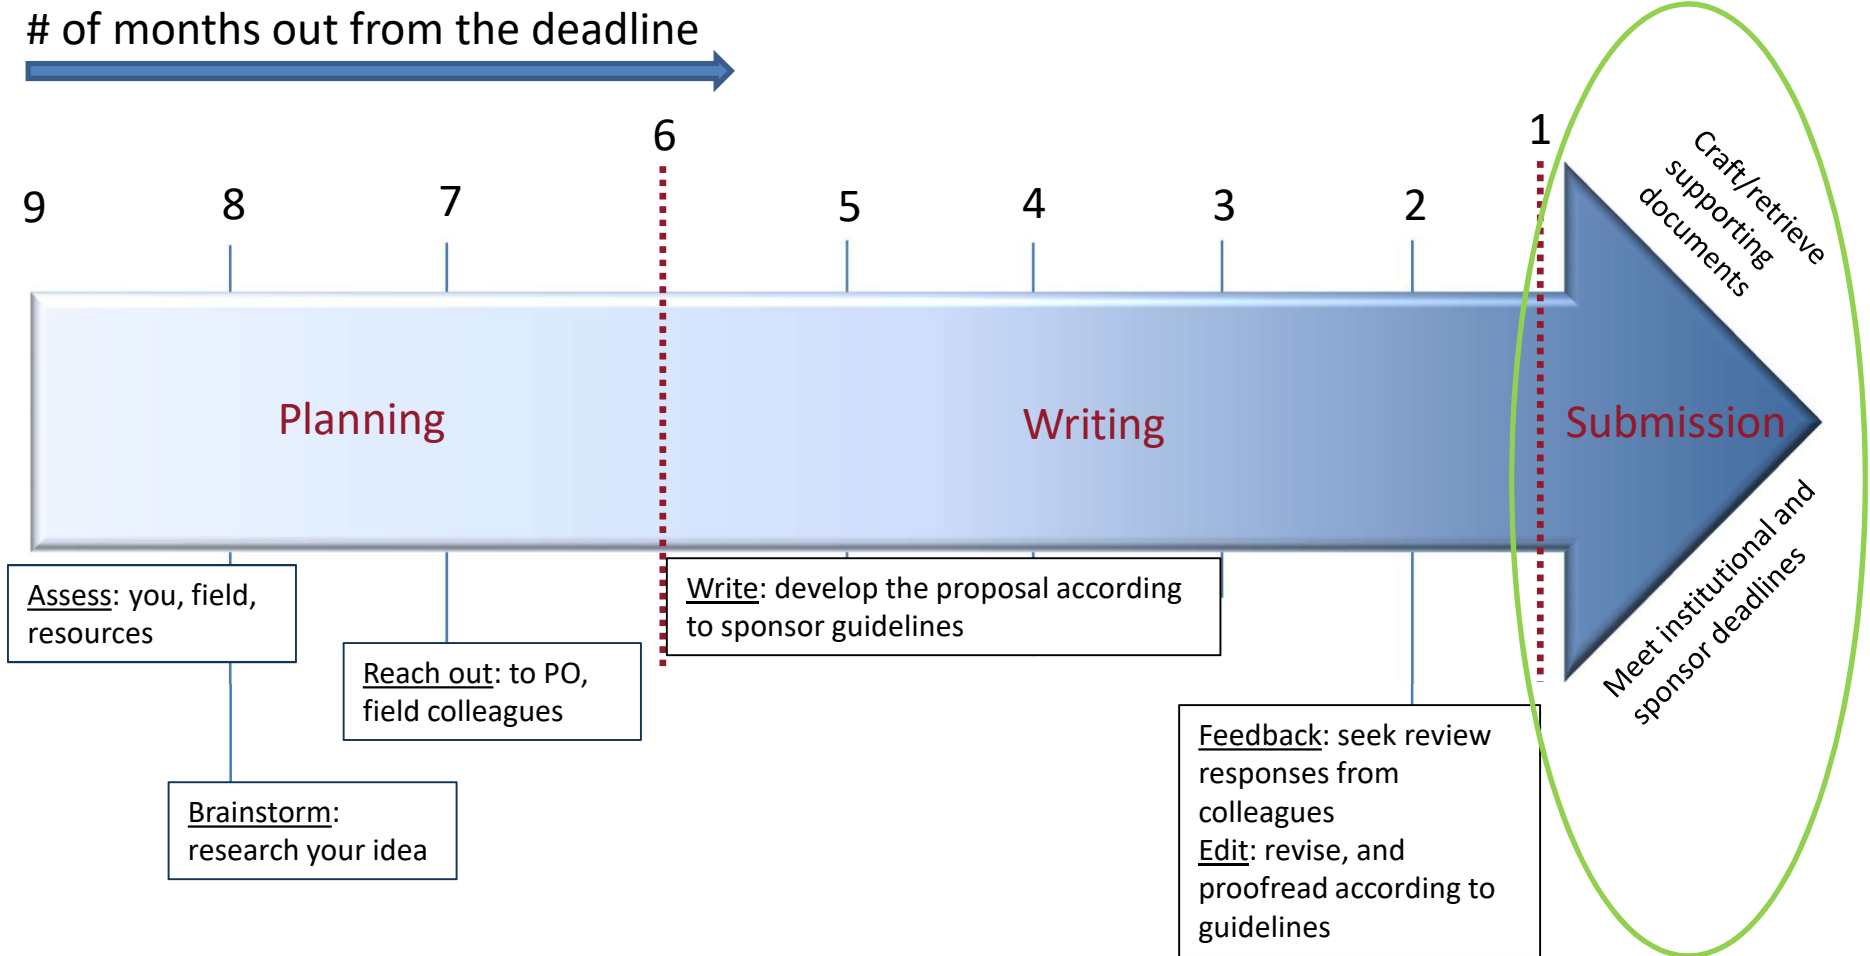

- ✓ Feedback sources
- ✓ Type of feedback
- ✓ Continuous or one time?

Revising/editing: This step includes comparison of the final proposal with the RFP/proposal guidelines

General proposal development timeline

The submission phase: Working with OSP

- Decided to submit?
Contact OSP
- Internal requirements
and approvals
- Supportive services
- Submission processes

The waiting game

- ✓ Celebrate the submission
- ✓ The review process varies by agency
- ✓ Other sponsor opportunities?
Consider applying

You've been awarded! Now what?

- ✓ Celebrate!
- ✓ Establish award
- ✓ Hire
- ✓ Purchase
- ✓ Implement project, maintain spending
- ✓ Travel
- ✓ Reports
- ✓ Looking ahead to future funding

Or, not funded...yet

- Read reviewer comments, file them away for a time
- Reminder: You are a part of the 75-80% of the applicant pool not selected for funding
- Re-review the feedback, and then reach out to the PO for additional insights
- Revise for resubmission or revisit your ideas/field

Don't give up!

How not to respond to reviewers' comments.
